

Cause and Effect Essay: Homelessness

Homelessness is one of the top social issues in the world. It is not only a big city problem, as homelessness can affect people everywhere, both in urban and rural areas. Homelessness comes in different ways such as living on the streets, moving between houses of friends, family and emergency accommodation or living in private boarding houses without a private bathroom. Therefore, every community has people experiencing homelessness, even if you don't see them on the street. Homelessness does not only affect people who struggle to find accommodation, but also residents in the neighborhood and business owner.

By definition, in general homelessness is defined as living in housing that is below the minimum standard or lacks secure tenure. The legal definition of homelessness varies from country to country.

One of the main reasons for homelessness is lacking adequate social support services to help homeless people. Social support services, either are funded publicly or privately could be able to tackle many challenges faced by the homeless. In addition to providing suitable housing, services such as drug counseling and career counseling can also solve some of the factors that cause homelessness.

Homelessness has a great impact on the homeless. Homeless people often encounter many health problems in their lives because of lacking of necessities. However, the impact of Homelessness may extend well beyond the individual. If homelessness becomes an increasingly obvious issue in a neighborhood, the area become too prone to criminal activities, value of homes may drop, families prefer to move out to a more secure neighborhood and businesses may close.

In conclusion, homelessness makes a challenge for communities in all the world. The causes of homelessness vary between individuals, but lacking adequate social services represents the main factor. Providing right social services can address some homelessness causes and reduce its rate. According to the great effects of homelessness on individual and communities, the governments need to pay attention to this social issue and put systemic way to reduce homelessness.
